READERS CONTRIBUTIONS

It may surprise you to hear that there have been numerous contributions this month!

Well - not really. 🙄

Not exactly numerous 😞

Well - not many at all actually 🙄

Okay - as usual 🐛 NONE!

So, our stolen article from 'WOODTURNER' for this month is an article by Philip Greenwood (apt name for a woodturner!) showing how you can make your own indexing system for your lathe.

Indexing, Marking out & Drilling.

HOMEMADE INDEXING JIG

This jig is homemade as this lathe and chuck are not equipped with indexing facilities.

As you can see, this is easy to make from a few scraps of timber and it will fit any lathe, all you need is a pair of compasses and a protractor.

The most important part is the hole in the disc which fits over the main shaft register.

If loose, you will not have consistency on the circumference.

I use this for drilling holes for ear ring stands, as I need evenly spaced holes around the circumference.

Be sure to place an even distance from the outer edge or it will look untidy, and may not have the correct number of holes

DRILLING ON THE LATHE

This is the drilling jig used in conjunction with the indexing jig. As you can see from the photo, this ensures the holes are drilled in the same place on the circumference

FEET ON BOWLS

If I need to put feet on the base of a bowl I will use the indexing to mark out the feet and space in between them.

First I will decide on how many, with three being the norm.

My index is divided into 24 so I will use hole numbers 1, 9 and 17 to give me three marks on the base to work from.

If I wanted four feet then I would use index numbers 1, 7, 13 and 19. This is the first stage

MARKING OUT THE FEET

Now I have my three marks to start from I will decide how wide to make the feet, bearing in mind the final shape, so I may need to make them wider to allow the waste to be removed. Starting at No.1 move the index ring clockwise to the width you have decided on, now place a second mark here, move on to second original mark, and move the index ring clockwise the same amount as did on the first foot, which will make this the same width. Do this again for the third foot. All that is needed now is to mark which area is to be removed as you don't want to remove the wrong area
